ALABAMA HATE PUBLICATION SEEKS SUBSCRIBERS HERE

A subscription drive and publicity campaign for an anti-Negro hate publication printed in Birmingham, Alabama, is underway in Toronto.

A copy of a special four-page publicity edition of "The Thunderbolt" was received last week at the offices of The Canadian Jewish News. It arrived, together with a subscription blank, in an envelope bearing the now-notorious Scarborough post-mark but no return address.

Regular issues, says "The Thunderbolt" in a notice to new subscribers, consist of 12 pages. The four-page special was "printed at the lowest possible cost to allow it the widest possible circulation". It carried an appeal to "help us to distribute 50,000 copies in the Birmingham area" and claims to represent the National States Rights Party — "America's largest third party" — and to be organized in 38 states. Now, apparently, it is aiming to "capture" membership in Canadian provinces as well.

RENAULT BID BY PARIS (JCNS) — A good will mission has been sent to Israel by M. Pierre Dreyfus, the Director-General of the Renault car company, in an effort to remove exports of the company's cars there.

Renault ceased to trade with Israel in 1960 after closing down production of its cars there because of Arab pressure. After M. Raymond Schmitt, a Vice-President of the French Assembly, obtained an assurance that the company is not discriminating against Israel, it was granted an Israeli licence for the import of Renault cars, but only for 30.

ISRAELI CRISIS:

PUBLIC RELATIONS

The time has come for the friends of Israel to speak up in defense of a dapper nation, embattled in the struggle for the survival of a people to whom humanity owes so much. But it also is up to those speaking for Israel to realize that something must have gone amiss with the public relations of that country. Obviously there are too many cooks involved in representing Israel to the world and presenting her case.

A day hardly lapses without some kind of statement by one of the many Jewish organizations which create the impression that they speak for Israel. Zionist leaders, leaders of various parties and groups are eager to be interviewed by newspapers and television stations, adding their "Zionist" point of view — often to the embarrassment of the people dwelling in Zion and the government they elected to represent them.

Time was when we gazed fondly upon every Tom, Dick and Harry who addressed a meeting or banquet (competing for headlines in explaining the problems of the Jewish state to the Gentiles). Now one can only hope that, in this hour of serious crisis in Israel's international relations — when the U.S. S.R. incites Egypt against Israel and Red China rushes to Damascus to "assist" Syria against its "enemy" — somehow all voices professing to plead Jerusalem's case blend into one, single, harmonious chord.

First of all, as an observer it seems to me that Israel has a much stronger case from all points of view than is apparent to one confused by the many declarations in and on her behalf.

A serious point is the widespread misconception of the refugee problem.

Israel never has refused to discuss this problem. On the contrary, she is ready at any time to pursue this issue with the Arab states whenever they are willing. For, conflicts between states, imaginary or otherwise, never are solved by a third party.

For example, it was always an international fact that France and Germany were enemies. Whereby a third party generally exploits the mediation for his own benefit, it took two courageous men like Adenauer and De Gaulle to put an end to what historians considered a perennial feud. Thus the hereditary Franco-German enmity was transformed into an alliance which gave birth to a political-economic miracle: the European Economic Community.

This could, of course, happen in the Near East.

Coming back to the refugee problem, very few are aware that at the time of Israel's birth only 500,000 Arabs fled the country. Meanwhile, a greater number of Jews, nationals of Arab states, from the Maghreb to Iraq, has been absorbed by this little nation than that of Arabs who VOLUNTARILY abandoned their homes in Israel because they believed the Jews were their enemies.

Also, much more property than the Arabs left in Palestine has been confiscated in recent years from Jews who have lived for centuries in such Arab countries as Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, Libya, Egypt, Lebanon, Syria and Iraq. Of course, so long as the Arab dictators are encouraged, in their obstinacy, to hide like ostriches in the sand of a political desert, any discussion is hopeless.

Another point is the historic fact of the Jewish revolt against colonialism in Palestine, the successful revolution against the British occupation of the historic Jewish homeland. What, then, was the revolt which brought about the recognition of Israel, if not the first anti-colonialist upsurge in the Middle East?

The issues are clear: the alternative to peace in the Middle East is world conflagration. That is why peace must be waged with the same determination as war and, in the long run (as the old Oriental adage goes), both for the Jews and the Arabs the least expensive war is — peace.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON WILL ASK HIM TO CO-OPERATE ON PEACE IN MIDDLE EAST — Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, whose role in the Middle East was discussed this week in Washington when Israeli Premier Levi Eshkol paid official visit to American capital.

U. S. URGES RUSSIAN-AMERICAN PEACE EFFORTS

WASHINGTON (CJN). — The Israelis in the entourage of visiting Israeli Prime Minister Levi Eshkol are very optimistic following the discussions with United States President Lyndon B. Johnson.

On the heels of Khrushchev's short love affair with Dictator Nasser, nothing could have been more soothing to Israeli nerves than Johnson's outspoken, friendly and encouraging words when he laid out the red carpet for the Israeli Prime Minister on Monday.

Diplomatic circles here in Washington agree that Johnson's courage vis-a-vis Israel is unmatched since President Truman's famous, dramatic announcement (in 1948) that he recognized the State of Israel.

Ignoring completely the threats by the Arab ambassadors stationed here, the American president told Eshkol in his welcoming speech:

● We Americans know that you Israelis want to live in peace with your neighbors.

● The friendship which is almost an alliance will continue.

Favreau Reacts To Dief's Complaint RCMP TO HOUND HATERS

A charge by the Rt. Hon. John G. Diefenbaker, made public in this spot in The Canadian Jewish News just two weeks ago, that Prime Minister Pearson was merely "playing with the problems (of legal action against disseminators of hate propaganda) rather than facing up to it", has borne fruit.

How sweet that fruit will taste to Canada's Jewish Community, or whether it will turn out quite sour, is still, however, a big question.

At any rate, the Pearson government, through the Department of Justice, has now reacted positively to Mr. Diefenbaker's charge (see main story) a charge which originated out of his disappointment with a reply given him by the Minister of Justice, the Rt. Hon. Guy Favreau, to his pointed questions concerning government action on hate literature in the course of a House debate on May 11.

A TEDIUS REPLY

On that occasion, Mr. Diefenbaker told a close friend that he had found Mr. Favreau's reply "tedious and to a certain degree so formulated as to avoid the issue."

The Canadian Jewish News intends to follow up the new government reply closely in the months ahead and to poll Opposition opinion as to the effectiveness of the new measures ordered by the Justice Department.

VERBATIM TEXT OF STATEMENT FROM THE FEDERAL DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE TO CJN

The following statement was dictated to The Canadian Jewish News's Ottawa correspondent by a spokesman for the Department of Justice who stated that it had been approved by the Minister, the Rt. Hon. Guy Favreau.

"The RCMP have been instructed to investigate representative instances of the distribution of hate literature in the Province of Ontario, in cooperation with the Ontario Provincial Police and the Metropolitan Police."

"The Attorney-General of Ontario has indicated that he will consider prosecutions under the existing sections of the Criminal Code if the necessary evidence is made available by these investigations."

"In the meantime, in case existing sections of the Criminal Code are found to be inadequate, the Department of Justice is continuing to search for a formula which will meet this evil without, at the same time, encroaching upon the proper limits of free speech. The difficulty is to find a specific formula."

IS THIS THE KEY?

OUTLAW FOSTERING ILL WILL

Encouragement for the cause of Canadian Jewry in pressing for anti-hate literature legislation comes with a Jewish Chronicle News Service report from Kitwe, Northern Rhodesia.

The report tells of a proposed amendment to the penal code of that distant land, where anti-Semitism is virtually non-existent, which would add to the term "seditious intention" the words "to promote feelings of ill will and hostility between different parts of the community."

For years the Rhodesian

OTTAWA (CJN) — Action against hate literature mongers is at last in the offing.

RCMP officers, cooperating with Ontario Provincial Police and Metropolitan Police in Toronto, are due to move against the lowly breed soon — but for the time being only with notebooks, not handcuffs.

That may come next, with charges laid under the present Criminal Code. Or, failing that, under amendments to the Code, custom-made to convict the culprits for their evil activities.

THREE ARMS OF LAW

Both these possibilities emerge from a statement (see box) given exclusively to Canadian Jewish News's Ottawa correspondent by a spokesman for the federal Department of Justice. The statement specifically mentioned the three arms of the law. It said they will be directed to reach into the rat's nest of hate and rummage around for the kind of evidence that will stand firm for a conviction under the Criminal Code.

So far, such evidence hasn't been found. But till now the authorities haven't been looking too hard either. That's what is now going to change.

EXAMINE LEGAL NICETIES

On the surface, the hate mongers have been slyly covering their poisonous tracks with legal niceties — advocating changing the law, for instance, to permit persecution of Jews and Negroes, not actually advocating direct persecution. But it is thought that they haven't been quite sly enough. If that is true, the Ontario Attorney-General may be ready to nail them with criminal charges that they will have a hard time wiggling out of.

SEARCH FOR FORMULA TO CONTINUE

Meantime, figuring out how to amend the Criminal Code to provide for the arrest of hate mongers on the strength of existing evidence, and at the same time safeguarding freedom of speech, continues to occupy the best legal minds among Canada's humanitarian element. Their steady pressure has no doubt had a lot to do with the Department of Justice's decision to declare its intention to seek that elusive but urgent formula.

However, pressure from another quarter — from Opposition Leader Rt. Hon. John G. Diefenbaker — probably prompted this latest declaration of intention, as described elsewhere on this page.

NEW STATEMENT ON JEWS

POPE PAUL RECEIVES JEWISH LEADER

ROME (CJN) — In an audience granted to Morris B. Abram, president of the American Jewish Committee, on Saturday, May 30, Pope Paul VI made the following remarks:

Gentlemen:
We thank you for your visit, and we greet with attentive esteem the courteous words you have addressed to us.

We have heard with gratification the resolution you have manifested "to safeguard the religious and cultural freedom of all people, and the rights of all groups to develop the human values God has given them, free from coercion and discrimination."

We are glad of the opportunity you offer us of confirming what is already well known concerning the attitude of the Catholic Church, and in particular of the Holy See, towards the Jews. This name of Jew, in fact, raises several questions, which we consider with serene attention:

First of all, the racial question, and in this regard we repeat the heartfelt wish expressed, on numerous occasions, by our venerated predecessors: namely, that this should never be for you, or for any other ethnic group, a reason for undergoing any diminution in your human rights, which every civilization truly worthy of the name cannot avoid recognizing.

Second, the political question, which it is not our business to pronounce ourself upon, especially at this time, although we always desire and augur that it find just and peaceful solutions, both for the populations who have already sustained so many trials and suffering, and also by reason of the interests which the Catholic Church, and the other Christian churches, may have therein, and which must not be disregarded.

Finally, the religious aspect, which interests us most deeply, and motivates our particular consideration for the Jewish religious tradition, with which Christianity is so intimately linked, and from which it derives hope for trusting relations and for a happy future.

Hence, while we again strongly deplore the horrible ordeals of which the Jews have been the victims in recent years, we wish you every favor from God, whom we invoke with all our heart on your behalf, and that of all those who are near and dear to you.

WAS WITH ANNE FRANK

AMSTERDAM (JCNS) — A woman whose daughter Judy became friendly at the Westerbork concentration camp with Anne Frank, is to give evidence at the Auschwitz trial here. She is Mrs. R. de Winter of Amsterdam.

She and her husband, and Judy spent the period from April 1943 to early 1944 hiding from the Nazis in the Dutch countryside. They were later betrayed by a Dutch Nazi and sent to Westerbork where they met Anne Frank, her parents and sister. The families remained together until the end of October, 1944, when Judy was sent to an ammunition factory in the Sudetenland and Anne and her sister to Bergen-Belsen concentration camp. Mr. and Mrs. de Winter were sent to Auschwitz where Mr. de Winter was immediately sent to the gas chambers. Mrs. de Winter survived and was liberated by the Russians, returning to Holland in 1945. Her daughter Judy rejoined her later.

PRIMATE MAY VISIT ISRAEL

BUEONOS AIRES (JCNS) — Cardinal Antonio Gaggiano, the Primate of the Roman Catholic Church in Argentina, may visit Israel at the end of this year. The Cardinal will head the Catholic delegation from Argentina which will take part in the fall session of the Ecumenical Council in India.

The Cardinal, who has appeared indifferent in the past to the antisemitic outbursts of some church circles, seems to be re-examining his attitude towards the Jews.

In March he gave a cordial interview to Mr. David Kessler, the Chairman and Managing Director of the "Jewish Chronicle", when the latter called on him during a visit to South America. Mr. Kessler was accompanied on this occasion by Dr. Moses Goldman, President of the South American executive of the World Jewish Congress, and the JCNS correspondent here. It was the first official interview given by the Cardinal to a Jewish delegation.

"REPRESENTATIVE" IN MEXICO

The Women's Division of the United Jewish Appeal should bring in $154,000 this year, an increase of $3,000 over last year, it was announced by Mrs. John R. Devor, 1964 Women's Division chairman, at the annual report luncheon last week.

Mrs. Ray D. Wolfe was elected chairman of the 1965 Women's Division campaign; with Mrs. David Wodlinger, first vice-chairman; Mrs. Gabriel Grushcow, second vice-chairman.

In her report, Mrs. Devor told the audience of almost 100 women at the luncheon that "it is the responsibility of all of us in the Women's Division to involve more and more women and to impress upon them the prime importance of the 'woman's gift'. This calls for a full-scale educational program. Our future challenge is to commit every Jewish woman in our expanding community to UJA."

Mrs. Devor also declared that "the prestige that the Women's Division enjoys and its enhanced image in our community, is due to the involvement of each of you. By your deep sense of obligation, you have demonstrated the importance and priority of our cause."

Jerome Diamond, executive director of the Jewish Family and Child Service, was the guest speaker. Rabbi W. Gunther Plaut installed the new officers of the

SYNAGOGUE ATTACK IN USSR

LONDON (JGNS) — It has now come to light that hooligans broke the windows of the synagogue in Astrakhan in the Soviet Union on New Year's Eve. The police found the culprits but there have been no court proceedings as yet.

The synagogue which is a converted house, is at 18 Babushkin Street. There are a few thousand Jewish families living in Astrakhan and between 200 and 250 worshippers use the synagogue on the Sabbath and festivals. A Minyan gathers there on weekdays.

HAMILTON'S DAY SCHOOL

The first annual banquet of Hamilton's Hebrew Academy Zichron Meir, day school of this noted Jewish community, promises to be an important event from the point of view of furthering Jewish education generally and strengthening Jewish life in the smaller Jewish centers.

Sponsoring a Jewish day school outside the great metropolitan centers is a most difficult undertaking. The fact that the Hamilton community has done so raises its stature to that of a vital center of Jewish life. It does credit to its spiritual and lay leaders and to all men and women who have helped build the Hamilton Hebrew Academy, thus demonstrating that a Jewish day school can flourish wherever people will it.

At the same time, the community will join in the commemoration of a founder of the Hamilton Day School, Max Hoffman, who, torn away so young in years, is sorely missed.

ASSOCIATED DINNER

PRIDE OF TORONTO

The annual dinner of Toronto's Associated Hebrew Schools this coming Wednesday evening again will attract the attention of the community at large to one of the most respected Jewish educational institutions on this continent.

To say that the Associated is the pride of Toronto's Jewish community is by far not an exaggeration. For there are very few Jewish day schools on the North American continent that can compare with the Associated both from the point of view of pedagogic advancement and Jewish content. During the past years, this school has become one of the features by which this community has become universally renowned as a fortress of Jewish education. Visitors come from afar to study its success.

Because of the Associated and other Jewish schools of high caliber, Toronto is world-famous as a city where the Jewish child truly is the concern of an organized community.

Speaking of the Associated, mention must be made of its president, Joseph Levine, a man of profound Talmudic learning and extreme intelligence, a successful businessman who devotes a good deal of his life to the development of this great institution of learning. Mr. Levine symbolizes Torah plus worldliness, which is the educational objective of the Associated.

We are sure that Wednesday evening the leaders of Toronto's Jewish community and all who are proud to share in the glory which is Associated will rally at this annual dinner to honor the school, to help plan its further development and to pay tribute to those who built it and those who lead it.

the Society for the Advancement of Ballet in Israel, sponsored by a number of well connected and well-heeled citizens.

This information was imparted by Adam Darius and his wife Marilyn. They came to Israel at the invitation of the Tel Aviv Opera, he as balletmaster and choreographer, she as prima ballerina. Darius is a New Yorker by birth, started his career in Mexico and studied and danced in Paris. For a number of years prior to his coming to Israel, he performed as dancer and worked as choreographer all over Europe and most recently in Sweden. Among the ballets he composed is the celebrated In Memoriam based on the life of Anne Frank which was seen in a number of European countries, primarily in Holland where it was given a Christmas Eve presentation on television. He came to Israel because he had wanted for a long time to live and work there, and the experience at the Opera has not dampened his enthusiasm.

Parallel with their preparation for setting up the company in Haifa, the Darius couple are giving lecture-demonstrations on the classical ballet in kibbutzim, in a planned, long-ranged effort to build up an audience.

WATER FOR THE PHAROON

Handelsblad, Amsterdam

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor
 I would like to express my appreciation to you for publishing in full the statement of Britain's Chief Rabbi Dr. Israel Brodie with reference to Dr. Louis Jacobs. (It was a dignified and forthright statement, fully in accord with the rabbinic view of Holy Scripture. I have read Dr. Jacobs' book, "We Have Reason to Believe" and I have found that he is too prone to accept the conclusions of modern Biblical criticism. Not all that goes by the name of scientific scholarship is really so.

With respect to some of the larger issues raised by Dr. Jacobs, I fear that both sides are losing sight of a basic premise of rabbinic Judaism. I need not quote the many statements in the Talmud which convey the idea that the Torah, once revealed by G-d to Moses, "is not in heaven," but given over to man to understand and interpret and apply to the varying circumstances of life. Thus the Torah, though eternal and unchangeable as far as its text is concerned, has what I might call an "eternal contemporaneity." Speaking in the modern term of "dialogue," we must bear in mind that one member of the dialogue is Eternal and the other member subject to the accidents of time. By the same token — and indeed because of that very fact — the text of the Torah is inflexible, but its interpretation is not. I have sufficient authority in both the Talmud and in the works of Maimonides to substantiate this statement, which I need not cite in a letter to the editor.

The crux of the matter is this: Interpretation of the text has been handed over to the "judge in charge at the time" (Deut. 17.9). In traditional parlance, this judge or supreme authority resides in the "masters of the masorah" (oral tradition). The Torah has prudently provided that these masters be the one central authority in Jewish life, duly constituted, having their seat in the Land of Israel. With the dispersion of Jewish communities this central authority ceased to function, though rabbinic authorities in subsequent centuries were authorized, within certain limits, to act as "agents of the early authorities." Thus the gates of textual interpretation were closed, though the interpretation of the "halachah" based upon masoretic interpretation never ceased, and thus was maintained the unbroken continuity of Jewish tradition.

This does not mean, however, that these gates must remain closed forever. With the radical change in Jewish life that has come about in our day with the establishment of the State of Israel, the possibility of re-establishing the authority of the "judge in charge at the time" is no longer remote. But this cannot be achieved overnight in one radical step. Just as the redemption of our people, according to our Sages, comes about gradually, step by step, so must it be with the restoration of the "masorah." Hearts and minds must be prepared, and the proper instruments have to be forged.

A major instrument leading to this restoration is the Chief Rabbinate in Israel. Our view of this institution should not be limited to its present competence. Just as the Jewish Agency before the establishment of the State of Israel was a "medinah bederech" and made possible the transition to full statehood at the historical moment, so must the present Chief Rabbinate be a "sanhedrin bederech" and make possible the transition at the proper time to a reestablishment of religious authority as exercised in ancient times.

If you ask, when is the proper time? the answer can be found in the prophetic statement "in its time I will hasten its coming," which implies, according to our Sages, that the time can be sooner or later, depending upon our willingness and readiness. Two things will hasten this process. First, a growing acceptance and recognition of the authority of the chief rabbinate by more and more Jews, not only in Israel but in the Diaspora as well. Secondly, a fuller use by the chief rabbinate itself of its existing authority as "an agent of the early authorities" by its recognition of the new era in Jewish life which has come about in our time.

Let us hope that the "proper time" will come to pass sooner rather than later and restore religious unity in our time.
 Montreal, P.Q.

RABBI MENDELL LEWITTES

B'NAI B'RITH NOT RESPONSIBLE

Dear Editor,
 In your front page Commentary in The Canadian Jewish News May 15th, you mention towards the end that you wonder why the ADL rushes to condemn the showing of "The Deputy". Since I saw a similar view expressed in a local daily — namely that the ADL was picketing this play — and this did not seem to me consonant with what I know of the ADL, I wrote Mr. Jack Baker of that agency and received the following reply:

"Dear Ben: Thank you for your note of April 16th concerning Ronald Evans' Theatre column in the Toronto Telegram of April 15th. Of course, the statement that ADL was one of the three groups picketing outside the Brooks Atkinson Theatre on opening night of 'The Deputy' is false. It may be based on the fact that on that evening an anonymous leaflet protesting against the play was distributed which bore, among others, the name of the Anti-Defamation League. The whole thing was, of course, a fraud."

I hope this will serve your purposes.
 Kindest regards,
 Sincerely,
 Jack Baker."

If you were misled by the booklet on "The Deputy" and on Pope Pius XII produced by Mr. Joseph Lichten of the ADL, it should be clear that this was done by him in his personal capacity and had no relationship to the agency by which he is employed. (It was published by the Catholic Welfare League.)

Furthermore, it is no secret that at a recent ADL conference in New York Mr. Lichten was openly criticized by some fellow staff members who wanted to dissociate themselves from it and to stress that his book was not a reflection of ADL policy.

I would urge that you publish this to make the facts known to your readers.

Intermarriage Results Analysed

Amsterdam, (JCN) — An interesting observation on "assimilation" and "mixed marriages" in Holland was made recently in an article in the Dutch-Jewish weekly "Nieuw Israëlietisch Weekblad". The author wrote that the percentage of mixed marriages between Jews and non-Jewish in Holland today was considerable, yet, this did not mean that Jews marrying non-Jewish partners would thus become fully integrated in the non-Jewish Dutch society, and thereby, a total loss to the Jewish community. On the contrary, the non-Jewish partner usually belonged either to a small cultural elite or to the fringe of society and this larger society, by and large, still continued to consider the Jew, and his children, as outsiders. As a result, it was often seen that children of half-Jewish marriages either married back into the Jewish group, or among themselves.

The theme of Jewish unity was also referred to by Dr. Moshe Goldman, President of the South American branch of the World Jewish Congress, who reported on his visit to Poland for the unveiling of the Treblinka monument. "We must tell Poland's small remaining Jewish community that we are the guardians of our brothers and will not desert them," Dr. Goldman declared.

to the weakness of the victim." The foremost loyalty of the Jew, he declared, "is to himself."

Four Jewish sociologists, analysing the situation facing Latin American Jewry, concluded that only a Jewish independent policy, a fighting strategy tied to Zionist identification, and adherence to Jewish life and education could create conditions for the survival of the communities of South America.

Answers "Toronto Zeitung"

No Forgiveness Possible While Monster At Large

By J. BIRENBAUM

An editorial in the German-language "Toronto Zeitung" of April 17th, entitled "It Can't Go On This Way," said in part: "In many respects — strange as it may seem — Jews and Germans are in the same boat. Both peoples, because of their recent history, have become oversensitive. Jews react with extreme sensitivity to the catchword 'anti-Semitism', and Germans after two decades of anti-German Hollywood hate-films and the slowly infiltrating poison of press incitement against all Germans, no longer possess the readiness for insight and cleansing but are threatening to fall into a new extreme of defiance." "It cannot go on like this" was the tenor of a meeting held by the Canadian Jewish Congress last Thursday in the Beth Tzedek Synagogue. What was meant was the flood of anti-Semitic propaganda distributed in Toronto in the last few months. On the 21st anniversary of the Revolt of the Warsaw Ghetto the CJC Chairman, Mr. Sydney Harris, announced the names of 15 persons actively engaged in the anti-Semitic agitation and demanded legislative counter-measures. Unfortunately among these are found five German or German-sounding names. This creates a political situation in which we German-Canadians are not detached spectators but are actors."

The editorial then tells of a "Mr. L.", who cannot be suspected of neo-Nazism as he is a half-Jewish German who had been imprisoned by the Nazis. He came to the newspaper office to complain of the great volume of anti-German propaganda describing war-time atrocities almost twenty years after the end of the war which "poisons the mind of German youth, confuses them, and creates doubt in them about the decency of their older generation."

Instead of rebuking the neo-Nazis of Toronto who, 20 years after the historic crime of Nazism, have revived a vicious agitation against the Jewish population, the "Toronto Zeitung" puts the Jewish community under a cloud for uncovering part of the neo-Nazi network and carrying on a campaign for legislation to stop anti-racial incitement.

The government of West Germany does not want to forget. It is prosecuting the Nazi war criminals. In our opinion many more Nazis should be tried in the courts and receive appropriate penalties. But despite this it cannot be said that the German government is "forgetting". Nineteen years later it is holding the culprits responsible for their actions.

The editorial writer is surely not so naive as to believe that what the Nazis did to the Jews in the last war is so easily forgotten, even after 20 years — even "despite all the restitution the German government has paid to Israel".

Nothing in the history of the world matches the mass murder which the German Nazis visited upon the Jewish people. Restitution by the West German government is only a small percentage of the enormous material theft which the Nazis perpetrated on the Jewish population of East Europe. Before the Jews were sent to the gas chambers the German authorities robbed thousands of Jewish communities of every possession. Endless Railway Transports of Jewish property moved night and day towards the German border. Gold fillings were removed from the dead, women's hair was shorn from corpses for the making of mattresses, skin was removed from Jewish bodies for the manufacture of lamp shades and soap was made from human fat. The Nazi murderers gassed a million Jewish children and sent their toys, clothes, and dolls back to Germany as gifts to relatives. The writer of these lines saw in Auschwitz the last transports of property which they were unable, at the last moment, to ship off to Germany. The stolen and unreturned property of millions of Jews has in fact played some part in Germany's present property.

There can be no forgiving, those monstrous crimes as long as the victims and eye-witnesses are still among us. And while people re-live the nightmares of the German Hell to this very day, thousands of others, with blood on their hands, walk about in freedom, having obtained asylum in various countries and having evaded justice. The writer of the editorial in the "Toronto Zeitung" takes as evidence a German half-Jew who was in the concentration camp and who agrees that after 20 years it is time to forget. I am a full Jew and the sole survivor of a family of 60 members. My father, mother, brothers and family perished in the gas chambers of Auschwitz and Belzen. Neither I, nor my children, nor my grandchildren can ever forget that.

Twenty years ago the Hitler slaughter machine, in which hundreds of thousands of Germans participated, slaughtered six million Jews in the sight of the whole world — men, women and children — solely because they were Jews. And now the "Toronto Zeitung" wants the world to forget about this, not to write about it, to show no films. Silence must reign even now that there is an attempt to stir up Nazism again.

What also pains the editorial writer is that among the names published of those participating in spreading neo-Nazi propaganda are found some German or German-sounding names. We should have thought that after the publication of the names of those carrying on neo-Nazi activity that the "Toronto Zeitung", which is known in this city as a serious newspaper, would either have kept silent on the matter or would have come forward and denounced those persons who had brought the Hitlerite theories from Germany to infect and envenom the free and democratic spirit of Canada. Instead, however, the "Toronto Zeitung" takes them under its protective wing. Has it not missed a great opportunity for noble action in a common humanitarian cause with Jews? And is this not a shock and a shame?

SERMON FOR THE WEEK

IN HEAVEN'S NAME

Among the great value concepts crystallized in thousands of years of Jewish life, one of the noblest as well as one of the most comprehensive, is that which is described by the Hebrew term "L' Shem Shamayim". The literal translation of this is "For the Sake of Heaven", and its meaning is that, whatever we do in the performance of our duty or in responding to any moral challenge should be done with such sincerity that our acts can be described as glorifying the name of God, i.e., they are "For the Sake of Heaven."

Judaism is characterized as a "legalistic" religion because the rabbis felt it necessary to specify every detail in the performance of a ritual or religious deed. Yet the rabbinic ethic never fails to stress the importance of the motive that lies behind the fulfillment of the law. God looks to the intention, to the purity and the quality of the deed rather than to its quantity. "It matters not whether you do much or little, so long as your heart is directed to heaven." The rabbis also developed the concept of "Kavannah" or the direction and inner intention that lies behind the deed.

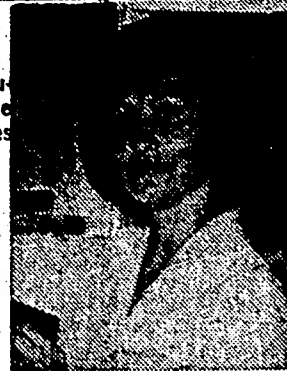

Why do we perform the Mitzvot? Is it to satisfy ourselves? Is it just to be freed of an obligation? Is it to meet the requirements of society? However important these or any other reasons may be either separated or in conjunction, the performance of Mitzva has little depth or power unless it is done "L' Shem Shamayim" — for the glory of God. Somehow or other we have to grasp this profound mystery behind all our religious behaviour — "V' tater libenu l'ovdecha be'emet", "Purify our hearts to serve Thee in truth."

The great thing about this teaching is that, properly understood, it can inform all our behaviour and lend deeper meaning to everything we undertake, so that even the mundane occupations of our daily life are transformed by connecting them with eternal value. There is a good story told about Christopher Wren, who walked among his workers at St. Paul's without their knowing who he was.

He asked one worker "What are you doing?" and received the reply "I am picking up a few bricks as I can carry in my basket". The famous man asked the question again of a second labourer, who replied "I am making five shillings a day". Wren asked a third man "What are you doing?" and the man replied "I am building a cathedral to the glory of God." Three men performing the same outward tasks, but only one worked with the power of a sublime intention directing all he did "L' Shem Shamayim."

Concert Saxophonist

Capitol Records Paul Brodie

By BARBARA I. PEARL

MAKES THE BIG TIME - Paul Brodie, Canada's foremost concert saxophonist, who has been signed to an exclusive recording contract with Capitol Records.

Chatting with Paul Brodie, director of the Brodie School of Music and Modern Dance, is a refreshing experience. For it takes a bit of doing to engage this modest young man in a conversation about himself. However, it isn't too difficult to learn that this thirty-year-old concert saxophonist is the only wind instrumentalist recorded among a dozen Canadian concert artists.

It was not easy, muses Paul. There was much toil, sweat and even frustrations. In fact, it seemed for a time that Paul would have to uproot himself from Toronto, the city he has learned to love, and seek his fortunes south of the border — in New York City, for instance, where, in 1961, he made his Town Hall debut.

But Paul's coming into contact with Lawson Cook, a record producer for Tamarack Records, turned the tide. He played tapes of his Town Hall concert for him. Mr. Lawton was thrilled by his musicianship and encouraged him to record a master tape for a record at Hallmark studios. The expense was enormous ($3,000), but well worth the effort.

Capitol Records has just released Paul Brodie's first long playing record, The Saxophone In Concert.

Paul, son of Florence and the late Sam Brodie, was born in Montreal. Soon after, his parents moved to Winnipeg and thence to Regina, Saskatchewan.

Despite these many changes, the senior Brodie says to it that their boys (Paul has a brother, Jerry) obtained the finest education.

Nor was that confined to general studies.

While in Winnipeg, Paul attended the Peretz School. In Regina, where the Brodie family resided from 1944-

TORONTO THEATRE HI-LIGHTS

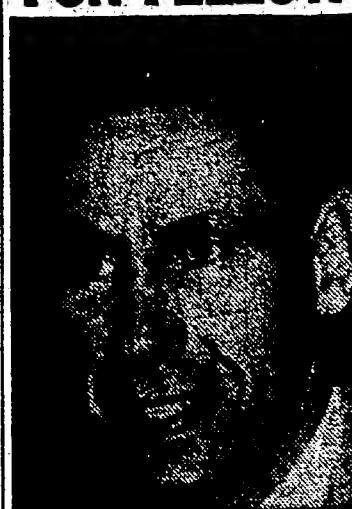

But one more week remains to see A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum, which will continue to convulse audiences till next Saturday, June 13th, at the O'Keefe Center. Starring Jerry Lester, Edward Everett Horton, Paul Hartman, Arnold Stang, Erik Rhodes, this side-splitting musical is the last of the season at Toronto's great showplace.

A Funny Thing... is here while still selling out every night on Broadway. There are the wackiest, zaniest clowns ever to cavort across a stage; beautiful girls like Panacea, Gymnasia and Vibrata; pirates, chases mistaken identities — so many laughs that could necessitate seeing the show more than once.

• Hertz Grosbard, renowned interpreter of classical and contemporary Yiddish literature, will be the guest artist at the closing affair of the 1964 Israel Histadrut Campaign, Tuesday evening, June 23rd. Specializing in the creative interpretation of Yiddish classic and modern literature, Grosbard brings to the stage an entirely new form of entertainment.

1958, Paul was cantor for the Jewish Congregation and a student of Rabbi L. Gold, who now lives in Toronto.

However, it wasn't until he had reached the point of higher education that Paul Brodie became interested in the saxophone. At the age of nineteen, he enrolled at the University of Michigan, from which he graduated in 1958. Then he was accepted as a student by the great French saxophonist, Marcel Mule.

Paul returned from Paris in 1959, taught music, toured and, somewhere along the line, married Rima Goodman of Toronto, who manages the dance department of their school.

In Regina, Paul's father had held twice the office of president in B'nai B'rith. Mrs. Brodie, who now resides in the States, always was active in Youth Aliyah, Hadassah and Pioneer Women.

Oh, yes! One more bit of information which Paul Brodie volunteered.

"Do you know my wife is expecting? In October." Already one can detect fatherly pride.

But this, the most important event in the Brodies' lives, will not interrupt their careers. They are considering an offer of a musical tour points West in February. With Grandma Brodie to baby-sit, who can blame them?

Art In Toronto

Exactly one year after the first exhibition of Marc Chagall's lithographs, Galerie Dresdnere is having another show of his work in the same medium. Focal point are the lithographs of the Twelve Jerusalem Windows, which relate very closely to the final sketch which Chagall made in preparation for the actual stained glass windows for the Chapel of the Hadassah Hospital in Jerusalem.

The exhibition at the Galerie Dresdnere also comprises a number of lithographs on Biblical themes, as well as some from Chagall's "childhood Memories", "Paris" and "Lovers" series, among them a large one of "Moses and the Ten Commandments" which Chagall made in 1960 to commemorate another of his stained glass achievements for the Metz Cathedral in France. Marc Chagall is the best known living Jewish painter. To cap the crowning of his career, which has taken him from the ghetto of Vitebsk to the windows of Jerusalem, from poverty to world wide fame, he has been commissioned by the French government to paint the ceilings of the Paris Opera, a work which will take from three to four years.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

BAKED BANANAS

1/3 cup fine graham cracker crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon grated orange rind (packed down)
6 firm large bananas
1 egg (slightly beaten)
1 cup butter
Mix together the crumbs, salt, sugar, cinnamon and orange rind. Peel bananas; dip each into the egg and then the crumbs. Melt butter in a small shallow baking dish — a pie plate is fine; arrange bananas in butter. Bake in a very hot (450 degrees) oven, 6 to 7 minutes, basting with the butter once or twice. Serve hot with whipped or sour cream. Makes 6 servings.

LIKE A DREAM

by Ruthie

Life's like a dream — it goes by so fast. How many times do we muse about this corny thought? Yet it's so true.

You notice, one fine day, that lone, gray hair. Suddenly you begin to panic. Where's life running to? All of a sudden you feel so old.

But you get a grip on yourself, call it a milk hair — milk hair brings luck — and even play it up. By the time two milk hairs appear, your hairdresser does a job. From a pepper-salt brunet you become a gorgeous blond. Like the proverbial ostrich, you fool yourself for awhile, and life goes on some more.

Ever come across someone you haven't seen in years? If it's a child, you exclaim. "My, how you've grown!" (What do you think he does — stand still?)

But, whether or not you realize it, what bothers you subconsciously is: how old you must be. Because everybody's ego revolves around an axis of its own; and anything that happens is relative to that ego.

But when you're face to face with another adult whose path hasn't crossed yours in a long time, then you can explode.

"How wonderful you look!" (Like my troubles.) "How do you keep so young?" (Hypocrite!) "You don't look a day older." (Such a year on Khrushchev!) "And your figure is so-o-o youthful!" (Skinny runt — it's better to be fat, like me.) "Not the smallest wrinkle!" (No, one massive wrinkle.)

What you don't want to acknowledge is, maybe people think the same of you.

Doesn't it startle you when you meet a child of an old acquaintance? You try to visualize the chubby, baby face of this twenty-year-old as you remember it. And now the youngster, maybe, is married. Where have the years flown?

All at once, the thought hits you: you're not anymore the center of the world; you're pushed back — a has-been. A new generation has taken over.

What gives you a jolt, though, is when your contemporaries begin their journey to the Great Beyond. After all, that's the inevitable, you can't fight it. So you tenaciously hang on — it can't happen to you.

Round and round she goes — just like a dream.

● We believe, and we will work for peace between Israel and the Arabs.

The dramatic conclusion of Johnson's warm address, the Hebrew word Shalom, the extreme friendliness prevailing during the reception at the White House, the 19-gun salute, the touching manifestation of amity at the State Dinner and the cordial atmosphere dominating the negotiations on Tuesday afternoon, plus the subsequent conversations on Wednesday among the experts of both countries — these have convinced diplomatic observers here that the United States definitely will take steps to induce Russia to help remove the cold war from the Middle East.

The Canadian Jewish News has learned that the most important problems discussed between the Israeli Premier and the American President were:

● The United States repeated to Israel that it will stand no nonsense in the Middle East.

● The Soviet ruler's military aid to Egypt will not change America's policy to aid Israel; in fact, the United States prefers complete removal of dangerous arms from both camps in the Middle East.

On the other hand, the Israeli Premier convinced the American President that Israel agrees heartily to the improvement of living standards in the Arab countries and is not concerned — on the contrary, she welcomes economic aid to the Arabs.

Johnson also believes that the Eshkol government is amenable to certain concessions in helping to solve the Arab refugee problem.

This is, in essence, the diplomatic picture involving Israel as Premier Eshkol is concluding his official visit to the United States.
